

I am AGAINST the sale of Rainbow DBS (aka VOOM) satellite licenses to Echostar (aka Dish Network). The ownership of VOOM HD, LLC needs to maintain the continuity of service using the existing satellite service at 61.5 in order to grow and prosper as the best HDTV provider in the industry. In my opinion, if VOOM were to lose it's satellite service, HDTV in the United States will be set back 10 years. The rival HDTV sources (satellite and cable) will have no incentive to innovate and offer significantly more and better content to match the 21+ HDTV channels offered by VOOM.
